1. Survey design and implementation

1.1 Main elements in the survey

The 1996 HUS survey is essentially a pure panel survey. Thus the sample consists of the respondents in the 1993 survey. However included in the 1996 survey is also a sample of new members, these new members are either children in panel households who have become 18 year or older since 1993 or individuals that have moved into a panel household

The basic survey design can be illustrated as follows:

| Survey group | Contact interviews | Main interview | | Question- naire | Sample size |
| --- | --- | --- | --- | --- | --- |
| | Telephone | Tele- phone | Personal | | (gross) |
| Panel | | X | | X | 2963 |
| New respondents in panel | X | | X | X | 276 |

In each household, the household head and spouse/partner were interviewed, as well as an additional person in certain households. Questions regarding the household as a whole were asked of only one person in the household, preferably the household head.

As in earlier surveys, data from the interviews was subsequently supplemented by registry data, but only for those respondents who had given their express consent. In the above-mentioned questionnaires each respondent had the opportunity to indicate whether he/she preferred to answer questions about tax assessments etc. or to permit us to take the corresponding information from the SCB registry. There is registry information for 75-80 percent of the sample.

1.2 Panel survey

The sample included:

a) all respondents in the 1993 survey, i.e., 4187 individuals in 2561 households,

b) all members of old survey households who were born in 1975, 1976 or 1977 as well as, in cases where such individuals had left their old households, their spouses or partners,

c) spouses/partners of old respondents who had moved into the household since 1993. When respondents who were living alone in 1993 had since started living with someone else, the new spouse/partner was interviewed. In the case of divorce/separation both spouses were followed and any new partners were identified and interviewed.

Field work

Training was carried out for Sifo's interviewers in Ronneby; representatives of the HUS project provided information on the preconditions and background of the project.

A letter of notification and informational materials were sent out to respondents one to two weeks before the planned telephone interview. The letter informed the respondents that those who completed the main interview would receive a lottery ticket. They were also given information regarding data protection and assured that participation in the study was voluntary.

Interviewing began in early February of 1996, with the bulk of the interviews conducted in February, March and April. The final main interviews took place during the summer of 1996. Interviews were carried out with the help of a CATI system (computer-assisted telephone interviews) from Sifo's telephone headquarters in Ronneby. At the conclusion of the main interview a questionnaire was sent to each respondent by mail, containing questions on income, assets, taxes etc. that were not suitable for inclusion in the telephone interviews. Both the telephone interviews and the questionnaires mailed to the respondents were largely identical to those used in the 1993 survey.

Response rates and nonresponse

If the household head had died, moved to an institution[1] or moved to a foreign country and was thus out of the population, the interviewers were instructed to interview other household members instead. One of these individuals was designated the new household head. If the household head was in a hospital or another institution for a long period of time, the household-head interview was conducted with another household member, preferably the spouse/partner of the household head if that person had been interviewed as part of the 1993 survey. If the household head had acquired a new spouse/partner since 1993, no household-head interview was carried out unless the spouse/partner was first interviewed in person.

If the household head was temporarily absent, the interviewer was instructed to come back after that person had returned home, but only if the survey schedule permitted such a delay. Otherwise this was classified as nonresponse.

[1]Persons living in an institution were not interviewed. Living in an institution implies that the individual did not prepare his/her own meals and that he/she had access to care and services. Most traditional homes for the elderly are considered institutions, as are hospitals and prisons. On the other hand, apartments for retirees that are interspersed with other housing and offer services are not considered institutions, nor are apartment hotels or homes for retirees where the residents have their own apartments and can choose whether to prepare their own meals or to eat in the home's dining room. For example: In 1993 a certain household consisted of two people, a man born in 1908 and a woman born in 1918. The man was interviewed as the household head. In 1996 the woman was living alone and the man was living in a home for the elderly and was suffering from senility. The man was considered out of the population and the woman was interviewed as the new household head.

The size and nature of nonresponse are shown in the following table.

1.3 Registry information

In both of the parts of the study -- the panel and supplementary surveys -- respondents were given the choice of either permitting us to take information on income, benefits and taxes from the SCB income registry or providing the corresponding information through interviews and a self-enumerated questionnaire.

In the data files special indicator variables show which source was used for each respondent. In the panel survey we received permission from 75.9 percent of the respondents to use registry information, in the supplementary survey from 95.3 percent.

1.4 Data file organization and data access

There are two types of data files: rectangular files with cross-sectional information in which each individual constitutes a record, and rectangular files with event-history data, so-called "spell files", in which each event or condition constitutes a record. The latter files contain dated information to facilitate following a sequence of events, such as an individual's labor market experiences. Generally an analysis of this type of file also involves using cross-sectional information on individuals and households. This is done by matching the cross-sectional information by using respondent numbers.

The 1996 data files contain no variables representing sampling weights, and only unweighted frequencies are given in the code book. The reasons for this have been given in the documentation to the 1991 survey. It is not possible to determine meaningful sampling weights for the panel sample. Anyone who is interested in arriving at estimates for finite populations of individuals and households can use the entire 1984 sample, the 1986 supplementary sample and the 1993 supplementary sample. Sampling weights for the latter sample can be determined with the help of information on the number of adult household members aged 18-74. Sampling weights are inversely proportional to this number. Note that each analyst needs to consider how to compensate for nonresponse.

HUS data may only be used for research purposes. The data that have been made available to researchers are identified. According to Swedish law, it is a criminal offense to use data for other purposes or to attempt to identify the persons originally providing information. Researchers desiring access to HUS data can contact either the Swedish Social Science Data Service (SSD), Box 720, SE 405 30 Gothenburg (email: request@ssd.gu.se) or Lennart Flood (address see below). In order to grant access to the data we need a summary of the project in which the HUS data are to be used, as well as a confidentiality agreement signed by all persons who will be using the data. In this document the data user agrees to adhere to Swedish laws on confidentiality and data protection and not to pass these data on to third persons. The user also agrees to send research reports and other publications based on HUS data to us (Lennart Flood, see address below). Data and manuals are provided at cost.

Finally, it should be emphasized that despite the fact that the data files have undergone comprehensive checking, errors remain. In a survey the size of HUS there will always be some mistakes. Accordingly, users are advised always to check their data. We are grateful for information on any errors that may show up; such information may be sent to:

In the case of children aged 1-2, this also includes absences in connection with the child's birth. Respondents who took parental leave during 1995 should include those weeks here as well, even if such leave was taken before the child's delivery. If the delivery resulted in health problems, absences are to be accounted for under paid sick leave.

SS517 Assume that a number of measures can be taken to reduce the level of air pollution in the area where you live and work. However, money would need to be raised in order to cover the costs arising from these measures. Imagine that these measures will be financed through a charge paid by the residents in your area, the level of which would be dependent on income. What is the maximum amount that you are willing to pay PER MONTH in KRONOR for the implementation of measures that will reduce the level of harmful substances by 50% (i.e. by half) in the area where you live and work? Please consider how this charge will affect your household budget each month.

For example: stricter regulations for permitted levels of discharge from cars, traffic diversions, and reduced emissions from industry. The level of air pollution will remain unchanged in all other areas in Sweden. Your answer must be given using your present situation as a starting point, not e.g. a situation where you had greater means etc. The reduction in air pollution will only be maintained as long as payment is made. The charge is not tax-deductible and affects all households, but not industry.

VAR 398　REDUCE AIR POLL　　　　　UU846　　　　　Loc 740　width 4
　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　　MD=8888

UU846 Assume that a number of measures can be taken to reduce the level of air pollution in the area where you live and work. However, money would need to be raised in order to cover the costs arising from these measures. Imagine that these measures will be financed through a charge paid by the residents in your area, the level of which would be dependent on income. What is the maximum amount that you are willing to pay PER MONTH in KRONOR for the implementation of measures that will reduce the level of harmful substances by 50% (i.e. by half) in the area where you live and work? Please consider how this charge will affect your household budget each month.

For example: stricter regulations for permitted levels of discharge from cars, traffic diversions, and reduced emissions from industry. The level of air pollution will remain unchanged in all other areas in Sweden. Your answer must be given using your present situation as a starting point, not e.g. a situation where you had greater means etc. The reduction in air pollution will only be maintained as long as payment is made. The charge is not tax-deductible and affects all households, but not industry.
