Foreword

Funds for the 1998 HUS survey was received from the Swedish Council for Planning and Coordination of Research (FRN), we would like to express our appreciation to those providing grants for this work.

We would also like to thank the Sifo staff, which did such an excellent job of carrying out the fieldwork for this large-scale and complex study. In particular we would like to thank Anna Fritz and Jörgen Svensson who acted like coordinator for the whole HUS project.

As usual a number of members of the HUS project research group contributed to the survey design and to formulating specific questions; these include Matz Dahlberg, Per-Anders Edin, Peter Englund, Bertil Holmlund, Anders Klevmarken, Henry Ohlsson, Mårten Palme, Altin Vejsiu and Marianne Stoltenberg.

Our thanks go also to Iris Alfredsson at the Swedish Social Science Data Service (SSD) who has done a great job in producing this codebook. We like to thank Lennart Brantgärde, the director of SSD, for providing the opportunity for us to utilizing the sophisticated software developed by them.

Finally we would like to thank all those who responded to our questions and in this way made our research possible.

1. Introduction to the HUS survey

1.1 Introduction

The Swedish HUS panel provides individual and household data for a random sample from the Swedish population. The first wave of data was collected in 1984 and since then data were collected in 1986, 1988, 1991, 1993, 1996 and 1998. Data cover many topics the most important being: Labor market experiences, current employment, earnings, schooling, socioeconomic background, housing, child care, incomes and taxes, wealth and time-use. Event history data are available for labor market events, household changes, child care and housing.

Several key characteristics distinguish HUS from other surveys: HUS is designed by researcher for research. In contrast to data collected for an administrative purpose, the information in HUS is directly related to and intended for economic research. Most administrative data sources look at one or a few aspects of the household at a time. For instance, income (HINK), consumption (HUT) working hours (AKU) etc. HUS provides data that cover a whole range of information about the household's market and non-market activities. HUS include event history data, covering a period from 1984 to 1996, a period during which Swedish households have experienced dramatic changes in the economic environment; a major tax reform, changes in transfer and benefit systems and increased unemployment. To study the impact of these changes has been a typical research activity involving HUS data. HUS is based on an operational household definition. Changes in family composition are monitored over time. If the household is split, both spouses are followed and re-interviewed. If they remarried, the new partner will also be included in the sample and interviewed. Thus, the dynamics of the household can be analyzed. This can have a crucial importance for instance in the study of labor mobility. HUS includes a detailed level of information for many crucial variables. As an illustration, HUS-93 includes six different measures of working hours, including as special cases the questions asked in other surveys. HUS also include a very detailed definition of household wealth, separate questions about durables are included, such as a car, a boat, furniture etc. HUS includes several sources of information that goes far beyond what is included in traditional economic surveys. Most noteworthy is the time-use study included both in 1984 and 1993. This provides detailed information about time spent during two selected days. To the best of our knowledge HUS is the only household panel survey with repeated time-use.

1.2 The design of HUS

The 1984 sample was a two-stage random sample of about 2000 households with a response rate of 76%. The population excluded people 75 years or older, those who lived in institutions or abroad, and those who did not speak Swedish well enough for an interview. In households with two spouses both spouses were interviewed. In some households also a third adult was interviewed. In 1984 all questions were asked in personal interviews and since then the design has been to administer personal interviews to respondents who join the panel for the first time while other panel members have been interviewed by telephone. The 1988 and 1991 waves are exceptions. They were smaller waves and most of the data collection was done by mail questionnaires. New supplementary samples were drawn in 1986 and in 1993. For respondents who gave their consent, data on incomes, benefits and taxes were obtained from the income registers of Statistics Sweden (SCB).

Designated respondents have been followed also if the original household had split. Household members who became 18 were added to the list of respondents and they were also followed if they left their parents household. A person who married or started to live with a designated respondent was also interviewed.

The sample size net of non-response is 2619 individuals in 1518 households for 1984. In 1993 the number of participating respondents was 4187 in 1996 they were 3172 and in 1998 3899. The response rates in the panel have stayed about 80% while the first interview response rates have been lower. Time-use interviews were done in 1984 and in 1993. The yesterday recall approach was used and every respondent was interviewed about his/her time-use in two randomly selected days. The table below summarizes the design and sample statistics for all HUS waves.

A detailed description of the design of the HUS waves 1984-91 is presented in Klevmarcken, N.A. & Olovsson, P., (1993), Household Market and Nonmarket Activities. Procedures and Codes 1984-1991. Volumes I and II, The Industrial Institute for Economic and Social Research, Almquist & Wiksell International, Stockholm. The 1993 wave is described in Flood, L, Klevmarcken, N.A. & Olovsson, P., (1997), Household Market and Nonmarket Activities. Volumes III-VI, Department of Economics, Uppsala University. The 1996 wave is presented in Flood, L. & Olovsson, P., (1999), Household Market and Nonmarket Activities. Volume VII. SSD 0596, Swedish Social Science Data Service. A Summary of the HUS surveys 1984-98

Year	Sample	Number of respondents	Response rates	Main Characteristics
1984	New sample	2 619	76%	Full survey: Family composition, family background, education, childcare, labor market, housing, wealth, income, time-use and consumption.
1986	1984 sample (panel)	1 904	80%	Full survey: Similar questions as in 1984, but time-use and consumption are not included. Event history data for the panel ; changes in family composition, housing and labor market.
	New members	211	80%
	Non-response 1984	598	8%
	New sample	820	59%
	Total	2 994
1988	1986 sample (panel)	2 297	79%	Limited survey: Primarily event history data; changes in family composition, housing and labor market.
1991	1988 sample (panel)	1 791	80%	Limited survey: Primarily event history data ; changes in family composition, housing and labor market.
	New members	263	65%
	Total	2 054
1993	1991 sample (panel)	1 811	91%	Full survey: Family composition, family background, education, childcare, labor market, housing, wealth, income, time-use. Event history data for the panel ; changes in family composition, housing and labor market.
	New members	201	83%
	Non-response 1986,88	733	43%
	New sample	1 442	71%
	Total	4 187
1996	1993 sample (panel)	2 897	74%	Full survey: Similar questions as in 1993 except that a time-use survey is not included. A section of environmental questions was included.
	New members	275	71%
	Total	3 172
1998	1996 sample (panel)	2352	79%	Full survey: Similar questions as in 1996. New questions about inheritance, gifts, the black market economy and municipal service. Environmental questions were excluded.

2. Survey design and implementation

2.1 Main elements in the survey

The 1998 HUS survey consists of four different samples; the panel from the survey 1996, new household members since 1996, non-response in the 1996 wave and finally a new supplementary sample. New members are either children in panel households who have become 18 year or older since 1996 or individuals that have moved into a panel household.

The basic survey design can be illustrated as follows:

Table 2. Survey design HUS-98

	Contact interview (Family composition)	Telephone interview (Main Interview)	Postal- Questionnaire (Insurances, Housing, assets, Income, Inheritances and gifts, Black market work)

Total number of interviews

In each household, the household head and spouse/partner were interviewed, as well as an additional person in certain households. Questions regarding the household as a whole were asked of only one person in the household, preferably the household head.

The first two lines in the table reflect the panel, i.e. individuals who participated in the 1996 wave. Head of household (HF) answer a complete interview (b) and the other members, i.e. the spouse or another adult member, a reduced version (c) (at most three individuals are interviewed in an household). Apart from the main telephone interview a postal questionnaire is sent out and again HF answers a complete form (h) and the other members a reduced (i).

The second group lines (3)-(4) are new members, these are children in panel households that have become 18 years or older since 1996, or someone that moved into a panel household. This group first receives a contact interview (a), then the main interview (d, e) and finally the postal questionnaire (h, i). Earlier non-response, lines (5)-(6), are also included. This group receives a contact interview (a) and then the main phone interview (f, g) and the questionnaire (h, i). Almost all individuals in this group participated in the 1993 wave. Finally a new supplementary sample are included, lines (7)-(8). This new sample are first asked questions from the contact interview, in order to describe the family composition, then a main interview (d, e) and questionnaires (h, i).

As in earlier surveys, data from the interviews was subsequently supplemented by registry data, but only for those respondents who had given their express consent. In the above-mentioned questionnaires each respondent had the opportunity to indicate whether he/she preferred to answer questions about tax assessments etc. or to permit us to take the corresponding information from the SCB registry. There is registry information for 75-80 percent of the sample.

2.2 Panel survey

Sample

The sample included:

- a) all respondents in the 1996 survey, i.e., 4187 individuals in 2561 households,
- b) all members of old survey households who were born in 1979 or 1980 as well as, in cases where such individuals had left their old households, their spouses or partners,
- c) spouses/partners of old respondents who had moved into the household since 1996. When respondents who were living alone in 1996 had since started living with someone else, the new spouse/partner was interviewed. In the case of divorce/separation both spouses were followed and any new partners were identified and interviewed.

Field work

Training was carried out for Sifo's interviewers in Ronneby; representatives of the HUS project provided information on the preconditions and background of the project.

A letter of notification and informational materials were sent out to respondents one to two weeks before the planned telephone interview. The letter informed the respondents that those who completed the main interview would receive a lottery ticket. They were also given information regarding data protection and assured that participation in the study was voluntary.

Interviewing began in early February of 1998, with the bulk of the interviews conducted in February, March and April. Interviews were carried out with the help of a CATI system (computer-assisted telephone interviews) from Sifo's telephone headquarters in Ronneby. At the conclusion of the main interview a questionnaire was sent to each respondent by mail, containing questions on income, assets, taxes etc. that were not suitable for inclusion in the telephone interviews. Both the telephone interviews and the questionnaires mailed to the respondents were largely identical to those used in the 1996 survey.

Response rates and nonresponse

If the household head had died, moved to an institution¹ or moved to a foreign country and was thus out of the population, the interviewers were instructed to interview other household members instead. One of these individuals was designated the new household head. If the household head was in a hospital or another institution for a long period of time, the household-head interview was conducted with another household member, preferably the spouse/partner of the household head if that person had been interviewed as part of the 1996 survey. If the household head had acquired a new spouse/partner since 1996, no household-head interview was carried out unless the spouse/partner was first interviewed in person.

If the household head was temporarily absent, the interviewer was instructed to come back after that person had returned home, but only if the survey schedule permitted such a delay. Otherwise this was classified as nonresponse.

¹Persons living in an institution were not interviewed. Living in an institution implies that the individual did not prepare his/her own meals and that he/she had access to care and services. Most traditional homes for the elderly are considered institutions, as are hospitals and prisons. On the other hand, apartments for retirees that are interspersed with other housing and offer services are not considered institutions, nor are apartment hotels or homes for retirees where the residents have their own apartments and can choose whether to prepare their own meals or to eat in the home's dining room.

The size and nature of nonresponse are shown in the following table.

2.4 Registry information

The respondents were given the choice of either permitting us to take information on income, benefits and taxes from the SCB income registry or providing the corresponding information through interviews and a self-enumerated questionnaire.

In the data files special indicator variables show which source was used for each respondent

2.5 Data file organization and data access

There are two types of data files: rectangular files with cross-sectional information in which each individual constitutes a record, and rectangular files with event-history data, so-called “spell files”, in which each event or condition constitutes a record. The latter files contain dated information to facilitate following a sequence of events, such as an individual’s labor market experiences. Generally an analysis of this type of file also involves using cross-sectional information on individuals and households. This is done by matching the cross-sectional information by using respondent numbers.

Variable names are found in the code book. For each variable that can be directly related to a question in a questionnaire there is also a name corresponding to the question number; these can be found in the code book as well.

The 1998 data files contain no variables representing sampling weights, and only unweighted frequencies are given in the code book. The reasons for this have been given in the documentation to the 1991 survey. It is not possible to determine meaningful sampling weights for the panel sample. Anyone who is interested in arriving at estimates for finite populations of individuals and households can use the entire 1984 sample, the 1986 supplementary sample and the 1993 supplementary sample. Sampling weights for the latter sample can be determined with the help of information on the number of adult household members aged 18-74. Sampling weights are inversely proportional to this number. Note that each analyst needs to consider how to compensate for nonresponse.

HUS data may only be used for research purposes. The data that have been made available to researchers are identified. According to Swedish law, it is a criminal offense to use data for other purposes or to attempt to identify the persons originally providing information. Researchers desiring access to HUS data can contact either the Swedish Social Science Data Service (SSD), Box 720, S-405 30 Göteborg (email: request@ssd.gu.se) or Lennart Flood (address see front page). In order to grant access to the data we need a summary of the project in which the HUS data are to be used, as well as a confidentiality agreement signed by all persons who will be using the data. In this document the data user agrees to adhere to Swedish laws on confidentiality and data protection and not to pass these data on to third persons. The user also agrees to send research reports and other publications based on HUS data to us (Lennart Flood, see address on front page). Data and manuals are provided at cost.

SECTION H: BLACK-MARKET WORK

The questions below are about what is called "black-market work", i.e., work carried out without payment of taxes, and thus outside the control of taxation authorities. There are indications that such work is relatively common, perhaps involving monetary payment, but it may also involve barter exchange between friends and acquaintances.
